

SIGNS YOUR CHILD IS SERIOUS ABOUT HORSEMANSHIP

So, your child is horse crazy, but how can you tell if it's just a phase? We've all been there. Your child expresses a keen interest in a hobby and a whole load of equipment and a boatload of cash later, you find their passion fizzles after the first few classes, leaving you with endless amounts of clothing and accessories that no longer have a use.

So how can you tell if horsemanship is a lifelong passion or a phase before you end up with a stallion shaped hole in your bank account? Well, here at Think Like a Pony, we know the signs that your child is serious about horsemanship because we were once horse mad kids at one point too. We don't just like ponies, we love them like you do.

HORSE THEMED BOOKS ON EVERY SHELF

Parents to true horsemanship lovers will find that their little one's love of horses will infiltrate every aspect of the home, and that includes horse-themed literature that ignites their passion. From shelves filled with horse books and magazines to horse-themed bedding, cushions and décor, you name it, they've got it.

GIFTS THAT SCREAM GIDDY UP

Instead of costumes, books and toys, your child wants horse-themed gifts for every occasion. We're talking about pony riding lessons for Christmas, pony club membership or equestrian magazine subscriptions for birthdays and pocket money is eagerly stashed away for horse-themed loot. Oh, and these toy horses that are bought with hard earned pocket money aren't just played with, they have an extensive feeding and exercise routine, an extra sign that your child won't outgrow the horse-mad phase for quite some time.

YOUR LOUNGE LOOKS LIKE A SHOW JUMPING COURSE

On the days that your child doesn't attend the stables, your house will surely mirror one. The couches become epic jumps, the floor punctuated with obstacles at every turn, while your child leaps over every homemade 'jump' with unsuppressed glee.

THEY HAVE A SINCERE DESIRE TO WORK WITH HORSES

If your child is ready for horsemanship, you'll notice a few subtle signs that their enthusiasm is genuine. They will have a strong desire to be independent around horses and will be eager to learn. More than this, your child will view a horse as something to be respected rather than a fun toy to ride. This recognition that horses are living, breathing animals with feelings just like humans, is something we nurture here at Think Like a Pony.

AN ENDLESS ENTHUSIASM FOR HORSE RIDING LESSONS

Lastly, when your child wants to go to their horse riding lesson come rain or shine, you know that their passion is only just beginning!
